ANOTHER WHISKY!!

IS THERE ROOM FOR IT IN HONGKONG?

WE think so, because wherever at home any special Blending of various distilleries turns out to be more than ordinarily successful the trade run after it, and the public generally follow suit. Our London friends have made a successful MARRIAGE of Whiskies, &c., a happy Blending of sorts. They use a newly shaped bottle, having indelibly stamped thereon in glass lettering the following words,

CUTLER, PALMER & CO.'S SPECIAL BLEND.

A consignment of this Blend has just reached us, and we shall be happy to show samples.

HONGKONG, NOVEMBER 23RD, 1894.

SOME idea of the commercial frauds perpetrated in Hongkong and the ports of China and Japan may be gathered from the working of the Merchandise Marks Act in India. The Government of India claim, we read, that the Merchandise Mark Act is achieving a great deal of excellent work in that country in the way of protecting the public against fraud. During the official year 1893-94 there were nearly thirteen hundred cases of detention under the Act. Thirty-three per cent. of these were in respect of the sub-section requiring all piece-goods to be stamped with their length, and the remainder were cases of counterfeit trade marks, false trade descriptions, or non-description of origin. A very flagrant case of fraud in Bombay is related. A certain firm imported fifteen cases of Maraschino from London in bottles labelled "Maraschino di Zara vera Fabbrica Eredi Garzeniga in Zara"—that is to say, Maraschino from the real factory of the heirs of Garzeniga in Zara. But the liquor was obviously not from Zara, for the price was only a shade above thirteen annas a bottle. The importers and the shipper both evaded for some time the delicate question of origin, but, threatened with confiscation and the maximum penalty allowed by the law, the shipper eventually made a touching declaration before the British Consul at Bordeaux that the Maraschino really was Maraschino de Zara, but that it was of Hungarian origin. Then it was discovered, most unfortunately for the shipper, that there was no such firm as Garzeniga in Zara, and that the Maraschino was a French concoction. In the end the importers were fined three hundred rupees and the "Maraschino" was confiscated. A number of other instances of vile spirits labelled with high sounding brands are reported. These in Hongkong would have passed without question, for although we have a Merchandise Marks Act there is no machinery for working it and the law is virtually a dead letter. Owners of trade marks have full protection against infringement if they discover it and choose to put the law in motion themselves, but there is no protection for the public at large against false trade descriptions. Nominally the importation of goods bearing false trade descriptions is prohibited, and such goods, if imported, may be confiscated, but there is no effective machinery for carrying the prohibition into effect, and seeing what efforts are made to circumvent the Act in India, where there is a Customs staff to enforce it, we may imagine what a large trade is done in fraudulent goods in the Far East, where there is virtually no check upon it. In India, we are told, quite a large business appears to be done in bogus butter. It is sometimes "Finest Dutch Butter" and sometimes "Butter Tarranted Holland Manufacture," but whatever the label, it is generally nothing more than margarine. We may be sure that a good deal of this kind of thing goes on in Hongkong and the Treaty Ports. At the latter no attempt is made to stop it. In Hongkong we have a law against it, but it is virtually a dead letter. Any general system of officially examining the goods imported into the Colony would no doubt, on account of the delay and inconvenience it would cause to honest trade, be considered even a greater evil than the dishonest trade against which the law is aimed, but it is well to recognise that as things are at present the law is ineffective and that the Merchandise Marks Act affords no real protection to the public in this Colony.

We regret to hear that Mr. E. Hoppius is very seriously ill.

The steamer Zafiro arrived on Wednesday night from Amoy. Information had previously been received of some accident having occurred between this port and Amoy, and it now appears that on the 15th inst. at 2.30 p.m. she grounded off North Point while endeavouring to avoid a collision with a junk. Although some rather nasty injuries were received, Capt. Cobban proceeded on his voyage as the vessel was not making any water. The Zafiro has now gone into dock here for necessary repairs.

A locksmith yesterday was convicted at the Magistracy of stealing a $5 note from a box which a private of the Hongkong Regiment has entrusted to him for repair. Fortunately the job was done under the owner's supervision and when it was finished he discovered that $5 had been abstracted from the contents. He arrested the man and having his suspicions that the locksmith had swallowed the note he hurried him off to the Doctor, who prescribed an emetic. This had the desired effect, for the thief pointed to the $5 bill, which he had just disgorged by a bit of sleight of hand from his mouth. Commander Hastings sentenced the worthy to six months' imprisonment with hard labour.

In the annual general administration report of the Presidency Division for 1893-94 the following passage on the Bombay yarn trade occurs:—"At the close of the financial year 1892-93 the prospect of Government taking measures to raise the exchange value of the rupee had caused difficulty in financing business with China and hampered the yarn export trade to that country on which local mills have largely depended. When the mints were closed in June, 1893, and all the evils of a fluctuating exchange were fastened on to our trade with silver-using countries in an accentuated form, the trade with China was at once stopped. This has been a terrible blow to the local yarn trade, as the mills have now to depend almost entirely on local consumption. Fortunately, owing to the excellent crops which were produced last year over the greater part of India, consumers were able to spend more money on cloth, ing, and an unusual local demand for yarn ensued. This enabled mills to clear their stocks, but left prices still low. At this moment it seems that this local demand has been supplied, and as China, owing to the vagaries of exchange, is still almost closed to the trade, stocks are accumulating and prices falling, and all margin of profit has disappeared.

ANOTHER ARMED ATTACK IN WINGLOK STREET.

DARING OUTRAGE.

ONE MAN KILLED AND TWO WOUNDED.

Crimes of violence are increasing in an alarming manner in the Colony. It is only a few days ago that an armed attack was made on a shop in Wing Lok Street and last night a similar affair occurred, in which an innocent passer-by was killed.

Between half-past six and seven six armed men entered the Chu Fa Lau, a hong engaged in the tobacco and general export trade, doing business with Singapore. There were thirteen men in the shop, who were threatened with revolvers, etc., and, submitting to the threats, they were all bound. This done a search of their persons was made to obtain the keys of the safe and money drawers. It so happened that while this was going on the cook, who had been out, returned, and, finding the hong door closed, and having in mind what had so recently occurred at a neighbouring shop, he surmised what was the matter and went for the police. A party of police were soon on the spot and proceeded to burst in the door, whereupon the robbers opened fire and one of the shots struck a coolie who was passing in the street in the head. This man has since died in the hospital. A Sikh constable was shot in the breast, near the heart, and in two places on the right arm, and one of the robbers was shot in the buttock by one of his own comrades. The Sikh constable now lies in a precarious state.

The gang consisted of six men, three of whom got away by the back of the house, but the other three, among whom is the one wounded, were arrested. Subsequently another man supposed to belong to the gang was arrested in Jervois Street, and a revolver was found on his person. The men who succeeded in effecting their escape carried away with them a sum of about $600, which they took from the drawers; the safe was not touched, as the key could not be found before the thieves were disturbed.

HONGKONG SANITARY BOARD.

The fortnightly meeting of the Sanitary Board was held yesterday afternoon. There were present—Mr. F. H. May (Cap ain Superintendent of Police) in the Chair, Hon. Ho Kai, Dr. Hartigan, Mr. R. K. Leigh, and Mr. H MacCallum (Secretary).

RESIGNATION OF MR. LAU WAI CHUEN.

A letter was read from the Acting Colonial Secretary accepting the resignation of Mr. Lau Wai Chuen.

INSANITARY HOUSES.

Mr. J. R. CROOK, Sanitary Surveyor, submitted a long report on the state of house drains in Western Street, Fat Lok Lane, Third Street, and Gough Street.

The following minutes were appended:—

Dr. Hartigan—The defects pointed out should be remedied.

Mr. J. J. Francis, Q.C.—This report on the state of the houses on Inland lot 670 is much more detailed than any to which we have been accustomed, and, so far, a great improvement; but it cannot be acted on in its present state as there is no certificate by the Surveyor that the "drains are in an insanitary and defective condition." Without this the Board cannot act.

This report does not distinguish the property of different owners, and it mixes up in a very confusing way things that must and ought to be kept separate. There are some defects common to the whole block that can only be put right by the redrainage of the whole block on a common plan, and by special order communicated to all the owners and requiring their co-operation. There are defects peculiar to each house, different in each in some respects, which only the owner of the houses can be noticed and called upon to repair. There are defects which seem to me to have nothing to do with the drainage by-laws at all, as Mr. Drury remarks about the absence of real kitchens in 33, 35, 37, 39. This may require the attention of the Board under other by-laws, but is not relevant in this report. There are remarks about the pavement of Fook Loong Lane and the necessity of relaying it and making provision for keeping the storm-water out of the Tokwalon Road that seem to me outside the scope of the report at all. They concern the P.W.D., if any one. It is useless laying a complicated report of that sort before the Board. It cannot make a just or fair order on it. It could only do right and justice by several orders. A proper report on a block of houses should be of practical value.

(1.)—State the No. of the lot or lots in the block and the boundaries by streets and otherwise.

(2.)—The number of houses in it, Streets and Nos.

(3.)—The state of the drainage of the block, the detailed defects in it (as distinguished from the defects in the house drains), the defects needing remedy and the suggestions for their cure, either entire or partial reconstruction of drains.

(4.)—The owner-ship of the houses in the blocks; the defects in each house of each owner; the recommendations as to each owner.

(5.)—If attention has to be called, as often may be necessary, to defects in the condition of the public streets, sewers, &c., or to other sanitary defects in the house not within the operation of the drains by-laws, separate reports should be sent in or addenda be made to the report at the end there to.

Where only one house is being reported, the matter is simple and the printed form, intelligently filled up, may suffice, but in reporting on a number of houses or on a block some more logical arrangement is desirable.

The Superintendent might easily prepare instructions as to the matter and form of a full and regular report. It will greatly facilitate his work if he does so.

What order or orders can be sent the Board to make on this report without himself going through it in detail and working out the separate owners and dividing the responsibility.

I do not lose sight of the fact that in this particular case the whole block dealt with may be the property of one owner, but it is unlikely and is not the common case.

Mr. E. K. Leigh—I agree with Mr. Francis' memo.

The Director of Public Works—The houses in Western Street, Fok Lok Lane, and Third Street are, I believe all situated on one lot, viz., I. L. 670; and Fok Lok Lane is a private lane and, consequently, its condition is a matter for the Sanitary Board to deal with and not the P.W.D. I agree with Dr. Hartigan.

The PRESIDENT said he did not agree with Mr. Francis. It was not for the Surveyor to inquire who were the owners of houses. That could be done by the Secretary of the Board, after the Board had decided that the defects must be remedied. He moved that the owners be called upon to redrain.

Dr. HARTIGAN seconded.

Carried.

MORTALITY STATISTICS.

The SECRETARY (Mr. H. MacCallum) reported that the death-rate was 20.1 for the week ended November 10, as compared with 20.5 in the corresponding week last year.

The death-rate for the week ended November 17 was 20.1 as against 21.3 in the corresponding week of last year.

The following minute by Dr. Hartigan was appended—Seven deaths from "Simple" continued fever is unusual.

On the suggestion of Dr. HARTIGAN, it was decided to enquire into several cases of dropsy at the Tung Wah Hospital.

ASSISTANT SURVEYOR.

On the motion of the PRESIDENT it was agreed to recommend Mr. E. A. Ram for the appointment of Assistant Surveyor at a salary of $250 per month.

Dr. HARTIGAN said it might be stated that the recommendation was made by the Board unanimously. They knew what Mr. Ram could do.

SANITARY OVERSEER.

Twenty-one applications had been received for the post of Sanitary Overseer. After some discussion it was agreed to appoint W. Townshend, at present a turnkey in Victoria Gaol and formerly Sapper in the Royal Engineers. He will be taken on probation after medical examination.

FOREMAN OF WORKS.

It was agreed, only four applications having been received for the post of Chinese foreman of works, to allow the Sanitary Surveyor to make his own choice.

ADDITIONAL STAFF.

A letter was read from the Acting Colonial Secretary, stating that His Excellency was prepared to appoint the additional staff recommended whenever the Board submitted a list of nominees for the posts, and that provision would be made in the Estimates for next year for the salaries and allowances required.

It was agreed to advertise for six additional Inspectors of Nuisances and six Interpreters.

The Board then adjourned for a fortnight, when the applications will be considered and disposed of.

FOOTBALL.

In connection with the Hongkong Football Club a match was played yesterday between teams captained by P. G. Anderson and R. Thomson. Swetenham for Anderson's side was a great acquisition, being very fast on the ball, and when shooting he did so with much accuracy. In the first-half he scored one goal, and another magnificent shot of his was just turned aside by the goal post. Deacon and Holmes were always on the alert and in their combined play did much to assist. Anderson kept the ball well up, centring from his wing with much accuracy. Kew by his coolness frequently averted danger. For the other side Ross Thomson played an excellent game, acting both on the offensive and defensive, and was well backed up by Davies. Millward and Anton played well together but were unable to score. In the second half, Holesworth, who was always in his right place, sent the ball through in a slanting direction, which could not have been stopped. A few minutes afterwards Swetenham sent through another in capital style. The game thus ended in a victory for Anderson's team by three goals to nil. Sharp kept goal well for the losing side.

ROYAL HONGKONG YACHT CLUB.

At a meeting of the Sailing Committee the protest of Brias against Ladybird was heard and determined and the Ladybird was disqualified for last Sunday's race.

The protest of the Payne against Ladybird was also heard and was held to be not proved, and the sum of $5 deposited therewith was ordered to be forfeited to the funds of the Club.

The course for the third Club race next Sunday, 25th November, will be from the Submarine Mining Pier, round No. 1 Dock buoy (starboard), mark boat off Lyeman (starboard), No. 1 Dock buoy (starboard), mark boat off Lyeman (starboard), finishing at the starting line, 14 miles.

CHINA'S PROTECTION OF FOREIGNERS.

The Rev. Gilbert Reid writes as follows in the Shanghai Mercury:—

On my return to China, during the time of war, I find our position as to safety and quietness, rather different from our imaginings at home. We may not get all the news of the war which people in Europe and America are sumptuously afforded at their morning and evening meals with their morning and evening papers, but for this lack we are not limited to more startling cablegrams and fanciful conjectures.

Having talked with those who are in constant communication with distant parts of the Empire, it is a pleasure to diagnose the conditions of our present security in a land which is at war.

The Chinese Government has a double task, that of resisting the inroads of Japan, and that of protecting the Foreigners within her borders. With these two theirs might almost be classed a third, that of preserving peace and loyalty among her own people.

The difficulties of Japan, examined as to either of these three specifications, are far less than those of China. As to the third, it is specially true, for the prosecution of war by Japan has both tended to remove the criticism of the opposition as to excessive military expenses, and has fired, by her successes, the patriotic sentiment of her people.

As to the first specification, Japan's task in carrying on the war is easier than that of China, because more fully prepared. Japan was not aggressive until she was ready to fight. China on the other hand was taken by surprise. The second specification is the one we desire to specially notice, that of affording protection to Foreigners, be they merchant or missionaries. Japan, it should be remembered, is a country of small territory as compared with the whole Chinese Empire. Every town is within easy reach of the Imperial orders and the Imperial forces. China, not yet bound together by a national system of railroads, still allowing as a part of her political organisation a distinct Provincial autonomy, and having failed to secure that centralisation for which she has been aiming, presents for the young Chinese Emperor a stupendous task in securing for every Foreign resident that legal protection and security which his edicts have promised.

In Japan, moreover, notwithstanding her agile progressiveness, there has never been accorded to Foreigners and especially to missionaries, some of the privileges accorded in China. In the former the right by passport is given to travel, first, "for the sake of health," and second, "for scientific research." In the latter the right has been granted to all classes of Foreigners, be they simply travellers or merchants, engineers, or missionaries. In the former, the purchase of property by Foreigners has never been granted away from the "concessions" at the Treaty Ports, and all property secured through Foreign funds has been held in the name of certain Japanese. In the latter, property purchased by the missionaries is not legitimately held by the Natives, but is contracted for in the name of the particular mission, and sometimes in the name of the Foreigners themselves. The rental of houses is freely accorded to missionaries. The result of it is that not only at the twenty-two Treaty Ports of China, in contrast with some half-a-dozen in Japan, but also in nearly every one of the eighteen provinces, some of which are equal to all of Japan, in Formosa, in Mongolia, and Manchuria, Foreigners, as propagators of a new faith, and representing various nationalities, are not only travelling, but also permanent residents.

To protect all these strangers from other lands is a difficulty we sometimes fail to realise. If here and there disturbances should occur during this time of war or some foreigner be endangered or assaulted, we should neither be too much surprised, nor blame China too much as faithless to her promises.

When I was at home I was inclined, like others, to judge that China was by no means safe for foreigners. On arrival in China, after questioning friends familiar with the exact facts, and taking a broad view of the whole situation, I have been surprised and gratified at the safety secured through the action of the Chinese Government.

Two German Catholic missionaries in Shantung, in the very region in which I lived for seven years, had been seized and held for ransom by a band of banditti, but this was only in line with a long-extended opposition, with which I was well acquainted. The Scotch missionary, the Rev. John Wylie, was horribly butchered by a mob of ruffians in Manchuria, but the mob, be it remembered, was in the very region of the war, and by soldiers made reckless by the lack of proper military discipline. The Foreign ladies in Peking were ordered to leave for Tientsin, or some other port, at least so far as orders from the British Legation and the Customs service were concerned, but this was due to threatened attack of Peking by the Japanese. Danger has also been deemed imminent by some in Hankow and vicinity, but this was owing to the turbulent and insurrectionary spirit in the Hupeh and Hunan provinces.

Outside of these few places mentioned, there has been but little fear and less danger. Those living at the ports in practically Foreign territory have looked to Foreign gun-boats for protection during the winter, but the hundreds of missionaries, both Roman Catholic and Protestant, in all the interior of China, have gone along in the usual way in the discharge of their duties, looking only to the protection of the Chinese Government.

And the Chinese Government has acted commendably well, when we consider the immense difficulties. It was something unusual in conservative Peking, to have proclamations posted at the doors of Legations, the cathedrals, and Churches, the Schools and Hospitals, and all the private Foreign houses, ordering the people to unite in protection, as the war was only with Japan. An unusual number of proclamations seem to have been issued all over China for the protection of missionaries, and the proclamation this time has been more than an empty talk; the mandarins have exerted themselves as if really anxious to prevent troubles.

In one city, where terrible riots occurred a few years ago, that of Yang-chow, the official has not only issued proclamations but promised a reward of twenty dollars, if any one should report a person guilty of reviling the Foreigner and stirring up slanderous rumours. In another city, where only a small placard has been posted, reviling the Foreigner, the official made a thorough motion against the evil doer, such as we have only been accustomed to in times of great outrage. Just as I reached Shanghai, I heard of two Italy missionaries starting for the interior up the Grand Canal, where missionaries have come and gone, with none to molest or make afraid. For all this, praise should be given to the Chinese authorities, especially since the past has abounded with complaints and reproaches.

At the same time, it is doubtless the policy of prudence to avoid, for a few months, bringing out new recruits for the interior cities of China, and to use the utmost tact in conciliation in dealing with the Chinese people in this critical time of Chinese History.

The missionary organisation is now a factor to be reckoned with in China, and it is a matter of thanksgiving that when harassed by war with an outside power, China does not forget her care of the stranger that is within her gates.

That was a smart boy who, in reply to the bishop's question, "My child, I will give you an orange if you can tell me where God is," retorted, "My lord, I will give you two oranges if you can tell me where he is not." This old story makes its re-appearance in a pleasant book of anecdotes just published.

EXCHANGE COMPENSATION IN INDIA.

Without the undoubted ability in many directions the Government of India does sometimes manage to make a terrible muddle, and in nothing, perhaps, has it shown itself more muddle-headed than in regard to the exchange compensation allowance given to its servants. The hord of any such compensation was only admitted after Government servants had been suffering, in common with other Anglo-Indians, for eighteen years from a falling exchange. It was not until the rupee was down to little more than half of what it had been worth when the older men joined that the claim to compensation was admitted. An admission so tardy is that came with a bad grace and could scarcely be expected to call forth much gratitude. The... even when the admission was made, no distinction was drawn between the older and the younger men, though it is manifest that in this respect their claims stood on an entirely different footing. A man who joined in the early seventies had every reason to look on a rupee as being practically the equivalent of two shillings. Some of them were expressly told that it was so. The men who joined in the eighties and later were not told anything of the kind; on enquiry they might easily have found out that a rupee is of very uncertain value measured in English money, and that whatever it may be, it certainly is not necessarily two shillings or anything like it. The effect of giving exchange compensation allowance equally to all is that the men with the best claim, after having been left to struggle against an adverse exchange for many years as best they could, probably just through the years when the burden of school remittances fell most heavily, got some little compensation for low exchange during the few concluding years of their service. The younger men, however, who ought to have known the slippery nature of the rupee before they joined, who certainly were not misled by Government, and who have no valid grounds for saying that they believed a rupee to be worth two shillings, are to get compensation through the greater portion of their service should the rupee remain materially below two shillings.

Not content with treating the older men whose service is nearly over in this unjust way, Government must bring in another element of confusion, of jealousy, and of all sorts of bad feeling, by introducing the question of "domicile." It is an absolutely unnecessary element of discord introduced into the question. The low exchange affects the Anglo-Indian not only in the matter of school remittances, but in other ways. It makes his trips to Europe more expensive and it decreases the sterling value of his savings. It is in connection with school remittances, perhaps, that the most serious cases of hardship have occurred, and if Government meant to alleviate these cases only, the simplest plan would have been to give compensation to those who could show they had families in England. But there are obvious objections to this; the men without families might reasonably enough have said that they were touched in other ways and they did not see why a man should be paid extra for having a family, which is want the compensation for low exchange on school remittances would have come to. But if a man is not to be paid extra for having a family, neither should he be paid less because his grandfather or great-grandfather was an Asiatic. What Government has to do with is the quality of the work done, and if it were found that at the present low exchange some compensation was necessary to men domiciled in Europe, that compensation should have been given to all in these branches of the service mainly filled by Europeans. To attempt to go into the question of domicile in each individual case is absurd. It is worse than absurd for it would have been difficult to introduce a more potent irritant, or to hit on a more effective way of stirring up strife, envy, hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness.

In a recent issue of Truth attention is drawn to this, and a protest made against the inquisitorial investigation into the family antecedents of claimants for compensation which the introduction of this question of domicile involves. Here are a few of the questions which claimants have been required to answer:—1. Are you a European or a Eurasian? 2. What is your father's nationality? 3. Where was your father born and where was he educated? 4. When was your father married and where; and what is the nationality of your mother? It is true that the form from which these questions are taken is said not to be applicable to officers; but the distinction makes the inquisitorial question all the more objectionable and offensive. There are doubtless many men, some of them most excellent servants of Government, who would rather go without the allowance than answer such question as these. They are off-naive in every way, and we quite agree with Truth in thinking that the best thing the Indian Government can do is to drop the question of domicile altogether. It is bound to produce great injustice. As it is, there are men drawing the allowance who are as likely as not to spend the rest of their days in India, while men are excluded who have families in England, and intend to take the first opportunity of joining them. We have always noticed that whenever the Government of India approaches this question of race, there is weakness, vacillation, and generally a muddle of some kind. This introduction of domicile into the question of exchange compensation allowance is not the only instance in which this appears. Hesitation and uncertainty are equally apparent when the so-called "claims" of different races to a share of official post are under consideration. All this might be so easily put a stop to if Government would once for all definitely decide to hold aloof from all distinctions of race and to meet all wrangles by saying:—"We know you only as subjects of the Queen-Empress. With your race or your creed we have nothing to do; and we will give all official posts to the most suitable and best qualified men we can find, paying all on the same scale whatever may be their race, creed, or domicile." Such a position as that would be strong and unassailable; the position now generally taken up is despicable and weak in the extreme.—Rangoon Gazette.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS.

When the proprietor of the New York Herald sent me to Tonkin, in 1883, to follow the movements of the French invading army against the Annamese and their powerful auxiliaries, the "Black Flags," he told me that what he wanted was the first news of any battle or important event, no matter how short the account; he would rather have five or six words, if they reached him before anyone else received the news, than ten pages after the first account. Here was great difficulty, for I found Colquhoun of the London Times, Cameron of the Standard, Quinton of the China Mail, Poulben of the Paris Evénement, and a number of other correspondents I could not hope to beat. When I reached Hongkong, on my way to Tonkin, I found Colquhoun getting ready to make the same trip, and we took steamer next day for Haiphong, the port of entry to Tonkin. Cameron and the others had already been afield for several weeks, but, as good luck would have it, there had been nothing worth telegraphing and Cameron was on his way back to Hongkong disgusted. At Haiphong Dr. Harmond, who had been sent out by the French Government to assume the civil control of the country as soon as the territory was conquered with the greatest consideration and had the fullest confidence of all. The war most fatal to correspondents was undoubtedly General Wolseley's attempt to relieve Gordon in the Soudan.—W. H. Gildor in the Illustrated American.

A MONKEY AND COBRA FIGHT.

Midnapore is infested by numerous bands of monkeys, which though by no means dangerous to people, are yet the source of very great annoyance and inconvenience. Recently one day our correspondent happened to stand at a window, when his attention was drawn by a hissing sound in the next house—a dilapidated, deserted building, which had not been lived in for a considerable number of years. In the courtyard of that house he found a strange spectacle. A big male monkey was sitting on a brick, while in front, its hood raised, its steely eyes glittering as if were, poised a big cobra. The two faced each other, as mortal combat bent. The snake hissed and attempted to strike the monkey, which went through quite edifying antics to avoid these attacks, now and then trying to catch the head of its opponent. It was an interesting sight—this combat between the monkey and the snake, and as the gentleman who was watching it from the window thought of taking a nearer view. He disappeared from the window and quietly, without disturbing the combatants, got on to the roof of the vacant house, from whence he could discern every movement of the fighting animals. He found the snake bleeding all over from scratches made by the unwounded nails of the monkey, while the latter had not once been struck, so agile, active, and watchful it was. Whenever the cobra threw its hood backward to strike the monkey would move to the left or to the right or in the air even, and the deadly fangs of its opponent would only come violently in contact with the brick. This manœuvre on the part of the wily Darwinian progenitor of mankind had the effect of lacerating the snout of the serpent, which was gradually becoming more and more disfigured by exertion, loss of blood, and excruciating pain. Half-an-hour and more the correspondent watched this strange combat, which seemed interminable, for the monkey showed no signs of fatigue or exertion. At last there was a respite as if by mutual consent. The cobra lowered its hood and coiled itself once but with its crest open, while the monkey took his seat on the brick and stretched out its feet, rubbed its palms, and yawned as any mortal would do. Curious to know what the result would be, the watcher on the roof, set motionless, careful not to give any indication of his presence on the battle-field. A few minutes' rest seemed to renovate the failing strength of both the combatants. For, refreshed by the morning breeze, they once again assumed the fighting attitude. Again was heard the hissing sound, and the din of battle. But this time the combat did not last long. In half an hour's time it was virtually ended, though nominally it continued for a long time after that. The cobra made a supreme effort to strike dead the indefatigable monkey, and so great was its force it applied that when its snout came violently in contact with the brick, it was almost stunned. That was exactly the opportunity for which the monkey was waiting; for like a flash of lightning it stretched its bony right hand and clutched the head of its spent adversary. Its touch, however, seemed to have an electrifying effect on the cobra, which at once coiled itself around the arm of the monkey and almost crushed the bone. The pain must have been very great indeed, for though the monkey did not howl, the workings of its face clearly indicated what it felt. A moment after, it began with great difficulty to uncoil the serpent, and at every turn rubbed its head against the brick. Blood freely flowed from the mouth of the cobra, though it still struggled for the sake of dear life. It was indeed a curious sight—the monkey rubbing the serpent's head against the brick, thus compelling it to unloose its coils, and looking at the bleeding mouth. By degrees, the cobra uncoiled; but the monkey was not yet satisfied. Again and again, with devilish pleasure as it were it rubbed the snake against the brick till very little remained of the snout. It was then and not till then that it threw the lifeless reptile in a heap of rubbish; and, calmly surveying it for a few minutes, ascended a tree and stretched its body on the branches to have a nap, which certainly it stood in need of after the terrible struggle it had maintained with a deadly reptile whose very touch meant death.—*A. OLLA PODRIDA.

Every visitor to the De Beers Mine receives a packet of rubies as a souvenir. A missionary having told the manager he was going to visit the old country to try and raise money, got $5,000 of these rubies, which he is selling at 6d. a packet.

This is an item from a bill charged recently by one solicitor against another:—

Called on you but you were engaged. We called again later in the day but you were out. On the following day you sent to us but we were then engaged. And upon our calling later we were unable to see you .....£3 3s.

That the late Hans von Bülow was an irritable and arbitrary personage enough is still remembered. The wonder now is that he was not much more so. In his brain, recently prepared in Egypt for examination, there has been discovered the cicatrix of an internal lesion resulting from an accident in childhood. In the cicatrix the ends of two nerves had got partially pinched. That this would be fatal to a man's—let alone a musician's—equanimity will be readily understood.

An expedition is about to start in search of Mr. Trevor Battye and Mr. Hyland, who were landed in June last upon the island of Kolguey, in the Arctic Ocean, and have since not been heard of. They were on an ornithological expedition. A handful of Samoyades people the island in the summer; but winter is now approaching, and unless rescue is quick the two Englishmen will have no chance of getting back. It is an open question whether their enterprise can be considered intrepid or foolhardy.

At a recent sale of household furniture and pictures at Newark a local broker became the possessor of a portrait in oils at the price of 4s. A few days later Mr. Turner, an art dealer in that town, purchased it for 10s., and after examination declared it to be a portrait of the late Duke of Devonshire by Gainsborough. The work of art, which for the past few days has been on view at Mr. Turner's premises, marked at £250, was disposed of to a London dealer at a high figure, and if the painting should prove to be genuine it will no doubt be heard of again in the artistic world.

In no matter relating to composition have more errors arisen than in that of punctuation. A story is told in the Pall Mall Magazine of a reporter who was describing the dresses worn by the principal guests. He felt it incumbent upon him to indicate that a certain lady, whom we will call Mrs. Brown, and who generally dressed with remarkably good taste and effect, had not upon this occasion attained her usual level of excellence. He therefore frankly chronicled that "Mrs. Brown wore nothing in the nature of a dress that was remarkable." But judge of his—and Mrs. Brown's—horror upon reading next morning in one of the leading papers of the States: "Mrs. Brown wore nothing in the nature of a dress. That was remarkable."

An idol's head of baked clay has been found in the sand dunes near Tangier, where it was laid bare by the wind. The mouth is large and wide open, the eyes small, and the cranium very small, the brow retreating, and the back of the head flat. It is said to have in extraordinary degree a likeness to idols found in Mexico, particularly to the god called Xipe. Eyes and ears are very little modelled, and on the top of the head is a pointed object. Xipe was a god worshipped on the coast of Mexico with rites of uncommon cruelty; he was also the god of smiths and gold-workers. His human sacrifices were flayed alive. The Tangier idol has been decorated with gold mica. The discovery may revive old theories of a primitive connection between the Phœnicians and the Indians of Central America.

A recent official paper issued by the Government of India shows that the destruction of wild beasts and snakes in India is not proceeding as rapidly as might be wished. The number of deaths attributed to wild beasts last year was 2,804. Bengal claiming no fewer than 1,510 of the victims. From snake bites 18,540 persons are reported to have died, the figures being much higher than in the previous year. There was a vast destruction of cattle. Tigers killed 12,340 head of cattle in Assam and 8,716 in Bengal, and leopards almost as many. But on the other side of the account is made of the killing of 15,309 wild beasts including 1,287 tigers and 4,088 leopards, and of 117,120 dead snakes. The Government disbursements as rewards under these two heads reached the high figure of 117,447 rupees.

The young "girl graduate" is getting out in America. She now appears to take part with her fellow male students in the rough horseplay which usually accompanies the opening of the academical year. At any rate, the New York papers state that in the opening "rush" at Wittenberg College, in Ohio, in which half a dozen students were severely injured, "the female members of the classes took part and some faces will carry the marks of their pretty fingers for days." "So this" (says the New York World) "is the higher education for women, is it? The old-fashioned prejudice in favour of separate schools for the sexes having been broken down, girls are sent to be co-educated with young ruffians whose disturbances of the peace make many of the colleges of the country notorious. It does seem that a sensible man ought to be satisfied with the damage he does his son in sending him among such associates without also sending his daughter to learn from male hoodlums how to become a coyden."

Dr. Trousseliavski, in an inaugural dissertation recently presented to the University of St. Petersburg, gives the results of some curious researches made by him on the bacteriology of hospital case-books and papers. Before use these are almost free from microbes. Old case-books which have been used at the bedside, and have afterwards been shut up in drawers from eighteen months to two years, also contain very few microbes. On the other hand, papers which have been close to, or in contact with, patients yield a large number of micro-organisms. In forty-six bed c
